The Latest Fad in Portraiture

MRS. PERRY BELMONT PAINTED BY CLAUSEN-COOPE.

A STRIKING and attractive novelty has been achieved in a new portrait of Mrs. Perry Belmont, the well-known society leader, by Mr. Clausen Coope.

Mrs. Belmont is shown from three different points of view. In the centre of the portrait you enjoy a full-face view of her. On your left hand you see the left side of her face in profile, while on the right you see the right side. The portrait is painted on porcelain, and the composition and coloring are of a very charming character. This is one of a long series of portraits of well-known social figures whom the artist has painted on porcelain.

It is well-known that the same face looks very different from various points of view. So true is this that often a man will say that a portrait is not good simply because it shows a view to which he is not accustomed. Some persons admire one side of a beautiful face and some admire another. When three views are given, there is a reasonable prospect of satisfying everybody. Moreover, the arrangement is symmetrical and artistically pleasing to the eye.

Some of the most beautiful and successful portraits have represented three persons, as, for instance, Sargent's picture of the three Misses Hunter. The interesting effect which is obtained in that case is also apparent when the same face is repeated three times, as in this new work of Mr. Clausen Coope.

Mrs. Perry Belmont is one of the handsomest matrons in New York society. She is tall and slender, has very clear-cut features and remarkably fine dark eyes. Her profile is very strong and regular, and gives a splen-

Leopold, King of the Belgians, the Wickedest Monarch in the World.

KING LEOPOLD'S PUNISHMENT

The Strange, Uncommon and Horrible Disease Which Has Seized the Wicked Old King of the Belgians and from Which He Knows There Is No Escape.

Diagram to Illustrate Raynaud's Cangrene, the Disease from Which King Leopold Is Dying. A—Black Spot at Heel Where Flesh Has Completely Mortified. B—White Area Dotted with White Spots. C—Fire-like Rim Around White Spot, Where the Disease Has Just Begun to Spread.

LEOPOLD, King of the Belgians, the most depraved, shameless and evil-doing monarch in the world, has at last been attacked by a disease which promises to be sufficient punishment even for his sins.

Ardent persons have long remained that wickedness seemed to agree with Leopold very well. In spite of the fact that he has been the cause of untold misery, degradation and torture, has done on earth for his own profit and aggrandizement all save torture by the instrument of death, he appeared to be enjoying a remarkably happy and vigorous old age, instead of being a tortured wreck, living with the memory of his sins and trembling before the ghosts of his victims, as their numbers would require.

When he was not seen walking in public, or driving, or attending church, he appeared tremendously busy and active. His back was straight, his step firm, his eye bright and he enjoyed a state of exalted self-satisfaction upon the successful outcome of his years.

But now the dreams have ceased. His days are darkened by the shadow of death. His end is certain. It is officially stated in Belgium that King Leopold is confined to his bed, suffering from a disease which is known to the medical profession as Raynaud's disease. Amputation may be resorted to, but in view of the patient's advanced age the operation is doubtful. It would probably only be resorted to, however, as a means of prolonging life.

The fatal disease from which King Leopold is suffering is understood to be Raynaud's gangrene. It is a disease of the blood vessels that is very painful during the progress of the disease. Usually it is a disease of old age, although it is also the cause which sends the young to the grave.

The fingers and toes are most frequently affected, often simultaneously, sometimes singly or in pairs, the hands and other parts of the body remaining healthy. The first symptom is usually a numbness of the fingers or toes, which soon changes to pain. This pain is of a peculiar character, and is described by those who have been afflicted with it as being like the pricking of pins. The fingers or toes or other parts of the hands and feet become white, and cold much. Finally the tip of the bone and the tissue of the nails are involved. This condition lasts only a few hours, as a rule, but may continue indefinitely. The senses of pain and temperature may be lost.

After the first attack the color of the skin is restored, as it is after a part has been frozen. The results become engorged and the skin is first intensely red or purple, then livid and clammy. Then slight swelling, pain, tingling, and often blinding pain. The pain may be excruciating, but in some cases a sense of numbness is the chief symptom. The nails become brittle and the skin assumes various unusual appearances. Certain spots may, varying from mottled yellow to the deepest hue of mourning, or patches of discoloration, as a temporary paralysis will first appear.

A very dangerous feature of the disease is mortification. The affected part, which is first pale, becomes cold and dead, then black and mummified. Across the black plane there is a white surface which is the line of demarcation. Sometimes the dead tissue breaks off from the living, leaving a healthy flap of red. Sometimes the mortification is confined to a spot where there has been an injury or at a callous spot on the body.

Gradually the flesh slough away from whose foot or hand may be amputated by the professional knife and to be followed by cicatrization, but since the disease breaks out again. It keeps on recurring until it causes death, unless the affected parts have resulted from some preceding disease, as frequently happens from its toxic disease, diabetic gangrene, it has never been controlled by physicians to any extent to-day.

It is the sloughing conditions arising death follows three months after it begins. It is unfortunate for that is the only cure in those with moderately acute cases, as the years after the beginning of the malady, they must be years of unspeakable misery, during which the patient is a burden to himself and to the surrounding from the extremities inward.

The treatment of the disease requires that the patient should exercise care to avoid and other influences which produce a recurrence. All nervous irritation and excitement should be avoided. In favorable cases of King Leopold's years he must attempt unobtrusive walks for exercise. But with persistent progression of the disease, as it becomes nearly impossible to make these resources itself effective. Opium, in any form is one of the difficulties which make King Leopold's case almost hopeless.

Nitroglycerin has been found beneficial in some cases. After the disease has developed the treatment is the same as that of chilblains, i. e., elevation of the limb and the application of dry dressings, when the patient cannot bear the weight of the sleeping limbs morphine is administered. Massage and electricity have been found of great benefit in some cases. Dry warmth and lukewarm bathing of the affected parts have been found helpful.

Some writers advise early amputation, while others oppose it. It is a question which must be determined from the extent of the gangrenes, the probability of septic and the condition of the patient. In King Leopold's case amputation would be seriously indicated, on account of the lack of ability to withstand shock at his age, but, on the other hand, the impossibility of maintaining any cleanliness in the affected part would still make it the best alternative.

When this disease has progressed to the point of sloughing, the patient becomes a horror to his fellow-men and women. Only a strong sense of duty, like that of the physician or nurse, or very large personal profit could induce any one to remain in attendance upon such a sufferer. The relatives or friends who would remain with the patient must show devotion of an unusual character, and it is not to be supposed that King Leopold possesses any friends of this character.

If any man deserved to be visited with such a living death as now threatens King Leopold, he is surely that man. His whole career has been a wanton disregard of every virtue, of the sanctity of human life, of the sacredness of family ties. His self-indulgence has led him to the most revolting vices. His self-gratification has led him to the most revolting cruelties. His self-aggrandizement has led him to the most revolting robberies. His self-indulgence has led him to the most revolting debauchery on record. Crime was not only condoned but encouraged by him when it was committed in the interests of his own pocket. Every man in his employ was encouraged to be a thief, a murderer, a robber, a ravisher, a debauchee, a drunkard, a gambler, a libertine, a pervert and a criminal of every description, and the more successful he was in these lines the greater favor he found in the eyes of King Leopold. Leopold was unbounded in his generosity to those who were successful in robbing, murdering and debauching for him, and he was unbounded in his severity to those who were not successful in these lines. Every man in his employ was encouraged to be a thief, a murderer, a robber, a ravisher, a debauchee, a drunkard, a gambler, a libertine, a pervert and a criminal of every description, and the more successful he was in these lines the greater favor he found in the eyes of King Leopold. From information obtained from physicians it appears that King Leopold is suffering from that terrible disease, Raynaud's gangrene. The lower of both legs are said to be slowly decaying and it is evident that the disease will spread to the thighs unless Amputation may be resorted to, but in view of the patient's advanced age he still try to decide. It would not be ready to be agreed for physicians to decide.

King Leopold has had a long list of princely favorites, notable among whom have been the Princess de Chimay, Cleo de Merode, Liane de Pougy and Emilienne d'Alencon.

Within the last few years he has become devoted to a new favorite, Baroness de Vaughan, and is a person of very low origin. She is the mother of two children, of whom Leopold is reputed to be the father. He treats them as his own children. On this woman Leopold has spent a large part of the $150,000,000 he has wrung from the Congo. She has a house connected by a bridge with the grounds of his palace at Laeken, near Brussels, a chateau near Paris, and a villa on the Mediterranean.

The only member of King Leopold's family from whom he is not completely estranged is his youngest daughter, the Princess Clementina. Recently the Princess neglected to salute the Baroness de Vaughan when she met her with King Leopold. For this excusable omission the King boxed his daughter's ears.

He possesses just the kind had been imposed the nation would have of a title that would fascinate a romantic saved $97,650,000 from this total, or also young girl, but he made such remarkable

In the House of Representatives Congress-man Adolph M. Sabath, of Chicago, intro-duced a bill imposing a tax of 25 per cent on all dowries, gifts, settlements or ad-vances of money or property in consider-ation of marriages of citizens of the United States to foreigners. The bill has been presented so that there can be no evasion. The money is to be paid into the Treasury of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to appoint a suitable deputy agent to collect the tax.

The Hon. Mr. Sabath supported his measure with very cogent and moderate arguments. The American young man, he pointed out, is deserting his own country for American heiress, while he clearly has no such right to do as a foreigner is allowed at an unfair disadvantage as compared with that foreigner. Assume that both the American and the foreigner are rich in real capital. The American has nothing but his stocks, good credit, his industry and intelligence, whereas the foreigner pos-sesses a title which in America can have no value, and which, as everybody knows, possesses a remarkable glamor for a young American girl.

One may ask what can be the moral qualities of the American man who is not a sufficient offset to the title of the foreigner. It must be remembered that a young girl, parents or less likely to be able to appreciate a man's moral qualities in the highest degree, whereas she is extremely susceptible to the title of the foreigner, and proceeds to his unjustified attractions, such as his waxed mustaches, his glib con-versation, his graceful manners and his affected familiarity with music, art and literature. Thus it happens that a girl frequently succumbs to the fascinations of a worthless fortune-hunter at twenty, whom she would not accept if she were thirty.

Clearly the American suffers from unfair foreign competition in the matter of court ships. Upon the principle of our protective tariff he is entitled to some treatment as will place him on a certain advantage, in-stead of at a disadvantage, as compared with the foreigner.

How is this matter to be attained? It is not wise to forbid such marriages, be-cause that is an interference with freedom of personal action which always prevented legislation. It would be equally unjust to forbid the noblemen from this country or to put a prohibitive tax upon them, for that would destroy them of the privilege of becoming desirable American citizens, if they feel disposed to lead a better life.

What better can one there be than to collect a large tax from the funds of the girl who deems the superfluous and un-wholesome luxury of marrying a foreign nobleman?

That will place the American suitor upon something like an equality. The girl will say: "This nobleman is very nice, but if I marry him I lose quarter of my fortune."

Then perhaps she will pause and con-sider the moral qualities and sterling worth of her American suitor. That will give him a reasonable opportunity to win her away from his foreign competitor.

In Congress, Representative Charles Mc-Weigir declined to do business with him. Gavin, of Chicago, a brilliant orator, made some very interesting comments on his colleague, Mr. Sabath's bill. They were under the auspices of the Vanderbilt-Szech-enyi wedding, and were evidently called forth by it.

"Every day seems to be bargain-day in the great city of New York," said the Hon. Mr. Mcgavin, "whether it be for a yard of ribbon or a pound of flesh, whether it be upon the retail counter of Broadway or the auction block of Fifth avenue.

"I do not wish to single out any par-ticular girl or any particular foreigner, I have nothing only those who have prospered in their lines, and whose looks upon them-selves those who have retired from the field of competition to do good for the ability to do so.

"It may not be as much to inquire what the name of the Union and what is coming over offered to the Ways and Means Committee, and other matters the business of trade and commerce. I found it has been very much con-sidered by the Committee on Internal Revenue, which are of such general importance as to make it worth while to bring them before the House, and at present whether the present time would be advisable to do so. Public opinion, I think, would be found favorable to such a measure.

"A bill has been introduced in the House ing that these things are not as they should be, one of my colleagues from Chicago to regard it as a joke. It proposes to impose a tax of 25 per cent on all wedding and settlement gifts or dowries made or given previous to or upon the occasion upon those titled nobodies. My colleague from Chicago has seemed to have in mind those of Greece.

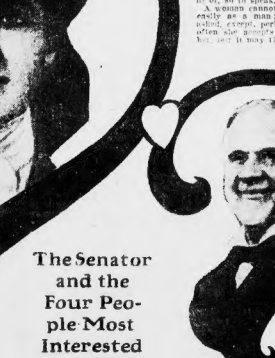
MISS MAUDE CASSIFORD

MISS KATHERINE ELKINS



EX-SENATOR HENRY GASSAWAY DAVIS

The Senator and the Four People Most Interested in Him.

Will it be rather more than millions and a half dollars worth or more of pretty suffering sweetness?

This is the question Miss Maude Cassiford, of Washington, is, if, had to decide when she consented to the proposition made her by the wife of Senator Stephen Elkins and Mrs. Arthur Lee, daughters of the notable ex-Senator Henry G. Davis and at one time Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency.

That Miss Cassiford sighs heavily between trysts as the prospective bride of their very aged and very rich father, and he content with the settlement of one million and a half on her outright.

The daughters of the very aged and very rich Senator are regarding this outcome of their long battle as Miss Ashford as the victory, but she says nothing much and only smiles as if some fond something or other crowns a few millions more or less questions. Now the daughters have relinquished connected to the marriage between ex-Senator Davis and Miss Ashford, and to be solemnized for some time in May or June.

If Mr. Davis should live so long.

At Washington is laughing over its teacups at the cause may be which Miss Ashford has evolved as society's jauntily pair. In the two were delightful society woman who so assiduously guarded their years aged and very rich and very dear father's welfare and his many millions. She would not have gotten this welfare and so many millions tendered were cool to the proposition and sometimes showed an exhilaration for Miss Ashford, but he finally got awfully bored.

Answer to all of which he had been accustomed to live with fondlements to adorn the a bachelor and indepen dence.

Ten years time after Miss Ashford and Mr. ex-Senator Davis engaged the news was kept from the family until some mutual friend, on whom it had been confided in a moment of delight, told somebody, who told somebody else—then the cat jumped right out of the bag and passed the door and walked into the Lee and Elkins households.

It had quite price.

Society whispers time was a storm. Anyway, Mrs. Elkins immediately sent no more to call her home on engagements and really left suddenly and flatly on the pleadings of the little Miss Katherine, who needs to remind her mother that they still had enough to spend in a Duke with If they wanted to "cross if dear darling grandpapa in a dear, still old gown."

Society went gaveling the war Society has.

Mrs. Elkins was still going to stand down to and see a peculiar thing of some kind, even as a peculiarity, if she could help it. She tactfully and insistently sent a denial of the report to the newspapers and lurked herself in a high state of indigestion in the midst of the storm. Some Miss Ashford soon blew at No. 918 Farragut square, in the heart of fashionable Washington.

Mrs. Arthur Lee, the other daughter of ex-Senator Davis, for whom Miss Ashford had formerly served as social secretary, reached her house at the same time.

Even intimate society was discreet enough to withhold some details, but—

All sorts of social stunts were held out to Miss Ashford to induce her to relinquish her lover and fiance. The most they needed few years.

Still a kid in the field was worth two in the bush, and Miss Ashford resented the proposition.

It rather resembles buying and selling out in the matrimonial market, all the same, you know, as Mrs. Elkins-Lee. Plainly put it.

One million and a half dollars is not a bad lot, however, for a woman thirty-five years old, who keeps on meeting even people who are accustomed to society. She broke the game at once—it took a score days to get a lot—and Miss Ashford added coolly, she just accepted the proposition with a shrug that is it.

Anyway, the richest woman in the world Then it began to be said that the engagement was to be broken off. Perhaps it may have let Miss Ashford on to formally ex-senator Davis' next love and Miss Ashford was a foreign guest at the old family residence in Lewis in West Virginia. His great wife was still alive, and it is said that shortly after their nuptials Mrs. Elkins noticed her father's infatuation for the charming secretary.

Mrs. Lee at that time took no stock in her sister's misgivings, and laughed them off. But a year ago the two women both were awakened to the serious necessity of keeping the father and the designing secretary apart.

Astute and clever, as they thought, they did this by cultivating Miss Ashford so assiduously, impressing that she should have no further time to still further endear their fond page. Miss Ashford was struggling in her sweet all the time for as she says "the mischief was already done." She had been engaged to the Senator for over a year. So society, like the dancer's parent kept on talking.

She is said to have said when confronted with a very disagreeable situation: "I wonder which of us three women is the most designing?"

When Miss Ashford was seen in Washington a few days ago she expressed much amusement over the excitement her engagement had occasioned. She declared that she would be sorry to leave her regular work, that she loved it and the spirit of independence it gave her, the earning and spending of her own money.

But," she said, sweetly, "I have other people to consider. The Senator declares that he will not be happy until I become his wife. He is dedicated about it, quite set down. I have an invalid mother and an orphan nephew, whom I desire to provide with luxuries. If left to myself I do not know but what I would please to continue in the same style of life I am now in.—We all have to think of the good of those near to us and who are dependent on us."

Miss Ashford has a frank, engaging manner and is as nicely mannered, her best friends declare, as the two daughters of ex-Senator Davis, and has a silvery, sweet laugh and voice. Her family is Virginian, and it is manifested in the appearance of her home on Farragut Square. Beautiful mahogany furniture generations old and rare old knickknacks and bric-a-brac from all over the world, full of former days of splendor which the present generation has endeavored to support. Mrs. Ashford's mother is a dear soul of the real old school, a perfect picture in her black silk and lace, courteous and gentle to all with whom she comes in contact.

The Ashford family, it is maintained, were formerly very wealthy, but their fortunes were materially decreased by the Civil War. They have always mingled with the best sets in Washington, although Miss Ashford has felt the pinch of poverty keenly and has been obliged to support herself.

Her friends still urge that for a long time Senator Davis has been endeavoring to persuade her to become his wife, and encouraged his daughters, Mrs. Elkins and Mrs. Lee, to show friendliness to her. Of course they did not realize his serious intentions. Just after the engagement was announced social Washington was thrown into a real excitement by the news that the Senator had become seriously ill.

Was the wedding to fall through, after all? was the whisper that ran through the capital.

Condolences were extended to Miss Ashford, as her fortune seemed about to slip through her grasp; but Love, be it mighty physician, and the Senator has recovered and is still anxious for his wedding to take place.

People say I am too young for the Senator," answered Miss Ashford, "but love, you know, levels all differences even in age and that, too, I have had lots of trouble and feel very aged myself sometimes."

The Senator just touches genially in his charming way and says he is very, very happy when asked about his engagement. He looks much younger than he is and evidently he is a diplomat in love—he is very sociable.

Anyway he is apparently very happy. Miss Ashford is decidedly quite happy. Mrs. Elkins and Mrs. Lee, now that they have secured the bulk of their father's fortune should be happy, and it is well that ends well, even between a bridegroom of eighty-five and a bride of thirty-five.

Timely Advice to Those Contemplating Matrimony.

By A WOMAN.

We do not give enough thought to the choosing of our life partners. Before taking, say a house, a man takes a look from every standpoint and is therefore able to judge whether it will be likely to suit him. Yet he will take a wife before he has decided on, or even thought about, the kind of one he prefers. He does not trouble himself about the subject before marriage. Unfortunately, however, there is the rub that he will do so after marriage.

But a stitch in time saves nine. The saying of domestic uniqueness is true. The world would be lessened in no small degree if every man and woman knew his or her requirements before marriage. The mind of course, gets the particular temperament, character, habits, etc., that he or she wanted in a partner.

We hear too much about the attraction of opposites. Marriage needs sympathy, not, contradiction. The kind of woman a man ought to marry depends on the kind of man.

Therefore, a man contemplating matrimony should first of all classify himself. He should make up his mind about such things as whether he wants to be a slave, or whether he wants the husband of a woman of independent, thoughtful mind. If the latter, has the greater attraction for him whether he wants an ornament, or one who can be a companion for his life. It is often advisable to look through a catalogue before making a purchase.

Man, of course, relishes the ornamental in woman, and has a hankering after it. Undoubtedly, we always want luxuries in preference to necessities. But a poor man, if he is wise, will not trouble himself about a society girl. She needs know that her marriage with a poor girl of extravagant tastes would not bring him permanent happiness.

In fact, the chances are that his sorrows would be great, which perforce he would drown in drink. It is hazardous to plant a hothouse flower in a cabbage garden.

A business woman is a safe choice for a practical man. She knows the value of punctual meals and of money; tradespeople will try to "do" her in vain. Moreover, she knows something of life. And she is used to forming her own opinions. She is not the wife for a conceited man, nor is she suitable for a stingy man, because, being accustomed to her own pocket-book, she will certainly demand her full share of the family exchequer.

Widows are supposed to be peculiarly desirable as wives. Many men, in spite of old Sam Weller's warning, still go to for them. And not without reason. A man who chooses one for a wife always backs fancy with his judgment. He knows that a young girl is a riddle of which the solution is a widow. Who can tell what a girl of eighteen will turn into? Will she be a helping matchless at forty? But the widow's transformation days are over. Besides, she is not too exacting; she understands men. In a word, she has the benefit of, so to speak, professional experience. A woman cannot choose a partner so easily as a man; she has to wait to be asked, except, perhaps, this year. And too often she accepts the first man who asks her, lest it may the last time of asking.

Married Happiness for the Ambitious Girl.

By A MAN.

T[illegible] could pre[illegible] should avoid matrimony. There is his strict plans, for as [illegible] ing, so [illegible] for capacity to [illegible] any other woman. But her mind [illegible] on winning fame and, therefore, when the novelty of marriage wears off, ambition regained itself as important, sapping the main factor in her scheme of existence, which, of course, husband and home suffer.

A man [illegible] perhaps to be, pleased with a woman's ambition—when he is her lover; at that time he will even promise that his strong arm shall put forth its highest strength to help her up the hill to fame. But after marriage the wife seldom, if ever, finds in her husband such a helpmate. She finds instead that if he does not oppose her to abandon her ideal dreams outright away, he will, by his coldness and indifference, endeavor to settle down in the commonplace dull-s shape he ambition slowly but surely to at death [illegible]

No doubt it is often [illegible] that the husband acts [illegible] ambitious wife.

It [illegible] to [illegible] upward and [illegible] ahead, a world of suffering is here in dead. For she is deprived of all the real [illegible] of love, and she has had to give up [illegible] the plans for the new life that were [illegible] under the influence of courtship [illegible]. And the disappointment is [illegible] hardly to be wondered at that the girl, despite [illegible] in her life work, grows [illegible] hard and unfeeling woman, the fault [illegible] of her unfeeling, selfish husband, [illegible] and higher instincts of her womanhood [illegible].

On the other hand, to give up her ambition will not [illegible] matters; for she knows that she will grow equally hard. For [illegible] ambition, if it is worthy the name of ambition at all, is part of herself, and its [illegible] from her life as painful as if it were a limb.

A man does not realize this. Because his wife does not rail and storm he thinks she will not [illegible] mourn. He [illegible] she has given herself up to the [illegible] planes of domesticity, and congratulates himself that he has knocked all the [illegible] nonsense out of her. But perhaps he [illegible] later on why the chic, brilliant girl has become a careless, nonsted woman, and [illegible] to think that such a wife as his [illegible] no means an enviable possession.

[illegible] management.

And could the daughters date [illegible] of her did. Miss Ashford might [illegible] where her decision and decide to keep her [illegible] riches, and then oh, then where would the daughter's position be? Society [illegible] such uncomfortable and annoying questions sometimes.

Miss Ashford has moved in the old rest [illegible] set of Washington all her life. She is a woman of ripe intellect and is every way fitted for her new position, so her friends describe her with natural enthusiasm. While not beautiful, still she is very attractive looking, with a graceful figure and beautiful wavy brown hair, slightly streaked with gray, framed in a well-bred, [illegible] face. For many [illegible] Washington society [illegible] Van acted as the society [illegible] her and the two become [illegible] was there [illegible] bargain day [illegible]

THE most intrinsically valuable and precious objects in the world—those whose value remains steadfast, or increases steadily, while that of gold and precious stones rises and falls according to the prevailing supply—are the few score paintings by the old Masters.

As the number of these paintings can never increase, their value never can diminish. Consequently they are an absolutely "safe" investment, and, naturally, objects of the cupidity of thieves, just as diamonds and other precious stones are.

Occasionally, too, there is a page of comedy in the story of these old paintings. Just now the recovery of the stolen masterpiece of Van Dyck, "The Elevation of the Cross," was accomplished under conditions which Audran might have seized upon for a comic opera situation.

This great painting, which was practically priceless, had hung in the old church of Notre Dame in Bruges, Belgium, for 200 years—almost from the day that Van Dyck completed it. Still in the archives of the church is the receipt given by Van Dyck for payment in full for the painting which now it is doubtful if money could buy at all—$250!

On the night of December 6, 1907, a thief cut the painting from its frame and disappeared with it, leaving behind no clue whereby he could be traced.

The authorities of Bruges jumped at the conclusion that the thief had taken his precious booty to America, the land of multi-millionaires supposed to be eager purchasers of old masters, and not too prone to ask questions.

Accordingly they appealed to Baron Moncheur, Belgium Minister to the United States, who instructed Louis Mosser, Belgium's vice-consul in the Pittsburg district, to set in motion a vigilant search of all places where a stolen painting of such value might be offered for sale.

The Pittsburg police and private detectives employed by the Belgian Government were given jumped at the chance to earn the $4,000 reward offered. Private detectives

Circulars were sent out, containing a photographic reproduction of the painting, with descriptive matter, and an announcement of the reward.

Suddenly, while the search in this country was at its height, the comedy scene in Bruges, and to within a few paces of the church where the painting hung and being cut from its frame.

A band of gypsies with a covered wagon, making camp among a clump of trees, happened to be watched by a sanctimonious Belgian policeman. Gypsies sometimes run "off" clothes-lines, or carry off their little children.

Probably turning these facts over in his mind the Belgian policeman followed the gypsy wagon into Audenarde, the village of Audenarde.

Just as the wagon was entering a side village street, down a steep hill of mud, one of the horses stumbled and fell in such a way that the wagon was overturned.

Out from the tent sprang the driver and two gypsy women, and a vast quantity of tempting provisions and silverware. Among the latter, Alcazar, the policeman's keen eagle eye detected a large picture, wrapped in a piece of old sacking.

So, seizing the old woman, the policeman gave the gypsy man a kick in the stomach, as a warning to his fellows not to interfere, then fully unrolled his find. Instantly he recognized the lost painting. It had been neatly cut from its frame, and so was unharmed.

Appropriating the picture in the name of the law, he arrested the leader of the gypsy band and took him to headquarters in Bruges.

There the policeman's find created a sensation. The good Catholics of Notre Dame parish were wild with joy. The whole city of Bruges

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1908

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

ABRAHAM LINCOLN was born on the 12th of February, 1809—ninety-nine years ago.

As President of the United States he followed such men as Washington and Jefferson. He lived and was elected in a day when this country looked for a big and strong man to be President. America had not then reached the stage of to-day in which corporations look for a pliable and reliable candidate to govern for them.

The nation looks upon the face of Abraham Lincoln and wonders when, if ever, such a man as that will again represent the people and make their fights for them.

We approach a presidential election. In the background stands Wall street—pockets stuffed full of presidential candidates, any one of whom WILL DO THE CORPORATIONS' WORK.

The people of the country look about and they see not one candidate whose election can be considered even a distant probability—except the corporation candidates, tame men, "safe, sane" and subservient.

The people have need of a strong man. They face a preposterous condition, a preposterous panic, due to financial corruption and to public indifference to public affairs.

The richest country in the world staggers under a load of accumulated financial villainy that threatens all. And the people, looking about anxiously, see no man strong enough to lift off the load and restore to the people that to which they are entitled — honest government, ruled by men instead of money, normal development of national wealth, free from taxation without representation by the trusts and the blood-sucking stock-jobbers.

This is a good time to recall to the people's mind a few of the sayings of Lincoln. What man talks to-day as he talked?

He opposed incessantly injustice to the poor. He would not tolerate the system of shameful fines so much in vogue to-day. Here is an extract from a letter to Secretary Stanton written when he was President:

"My Dear Sir—A poor widow by the name of Baird has a son in the army that for some offence has been sentenced to serve a long time without pay, or at most with very little pay. I do not like this punishment of withholding pay—it falls so very hard upon poor families."

He knew how to have his own way when necessary, to cut across lots and brush aside the little, dilettante gentlemen putting foolish restrictions in the way of ability. He wrote this to the Secretary of War:

"Dear Sir—I personally wish Jacob Freeze of New Jersey to be appointed colonel for a colored regiment, and this regardless of whether he can tell the exact shades of Julius Caesar's hair."

Here's an extract from an address he made at a fair in April, 1864:

"The world has never had a good definition of the word Liberty, and the American people just now are much in want of one. We all declare for Liberty; but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing. With some the word Liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with his own labor; while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor. Here are two not only different, but incompatible things called by the same name, Liberty. And it follows that each of the things, is, by the respective parties, called by two different and incompatible names—Liberty and Tyranny."

We need a President now able to take that view of liberty and steadily resist the demands of powerful gentlemen who think that Liberty means permission for them "to do as they please with other men's labor."

Of men's rights he said, further, in a letter to some Baptist society:

"To read in the Bible, as the word of God himself, that 'In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,' and to preach therefrom that 'In the sweat of other men's faces shalt thou eat bread,' to my mind can scarcely be reconciled with honesty, sincerity. When brought to my final reckoning, may I have to answer for robbing no man of his goods."

He was as modest as he was great, able to see greatness in others and to recognize it. He wrote to General Grant:

"The particulars of your plans I neither know nor seek to know. You are vigilant and self-reliant; and, pleased with this, I wish not to obtrude any constraints or restraints upon you."

And he wrote to General Sherman after the capture of Savannah:

"When you were about leaving Atlanta for the Atlantic coast I was anxious, if not fearful; but, feeling that you were the better judge, and remembering that 'nothing risked, nothing gained,' I did not interfere. Now, the undertaking being a success, the honor is all yours; for I believe none of us went further than to acquiesce."

He cared little for personal glory. It was foreign to his nature to be jealous of any man's success.

In his last public address in Washington in 1865, after the evacuation of Petersburg and Richmond, giving the good news to the people, he said:

"No part of the honor for plan or execution is mine. To General Grant, his skilful officers and brave men all belongs."

We occasionally read addresses and messages in these days that have a sound different from that.

Abraham Lincoln was a strange lawyer. "He never willingly defended any one whom he did not believe to be innocent." This would seem strange to some of our "great legal minds" of to-day—the Tweed lawyer, Elihu Root! Root, now Secretary of State, and others.

Such men as Root and those in power now, with few exceptions, would have a fine scorn for Lincoln. Secretly they would join in the feelings of those who hounded him as a demagogue, accused him of every villainy and rejoiced at his death.

The nation which produced Abraham Lincoln has produced other Lincolns, will produce them in future, AND IS PRODUCING THEM TO-DAY.

The people could find them if they WOULD. But, unfortunately, the majority of the people seek for the next day's dollar or the next day's million dollars. The seeking out of candidates is left to those that require of a President servility, not public service.

And, therefore, every celebration of Lincoln's birth day is a reproach to the indifference of the people, a sad reminder that, advancing in many directions, the people have gone backward, temporarily at least, in the line of self-government.

A Lincoln will appear, but he will not come from the pockets of Wall street, from the corporation bench, the millionaires' collection of tame politicians, or the ranks of the self-seeking.

WOMEN and CIGARETTES by ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Look to the Boys—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Copyright, 1908, by American-Examiner

Oh, you who mourn about To-day's dark sorrows,
What part have you in bringing bright To-morrows?

Earth's future glory and its hopes and joys
Lie in the hearts and hands of growing boys.

The world is theirs, to do with as they will;
The world is theirs, for good results or ill.

We soon must give into their outstretched hands
The mighty issues of our changing lands.

In Earth's large house they yet shall take their place,
A menace or a glory to the race.

Tremendous issues on Time's threshold wait;
We need strong men to guide the ship of state

Into the harbor of the next decade.
Look to the boys, from whom strong men are made.

Oh, you who mourn about To-day's dark sorrows,
Arise, arise, and speed the bright To-morrows.

THE growing tendency of woman to smoke must be regarded as a misfortune to the race by all who think deeper than the surface of things.

It matters little as to that the use of tobacco in any form is unwomanly in the extreme does no good to any one. Until Nature provides some other way for the race to obtain birth it is the part of mother and the instincts of womanhood are of greater importance to the world than those of man.

Every child comes into the world strongly impressed by the prenatal condition surrounding the mother.

Science has proven that the poorly nourished and ill fed mother produces an anemic and weakly child, and that drinking mothers produces diseased or abnormal children. In countries where great poverty exists, and where women are the burden bearers, the race is almost always undersized.

The accumulation of proofs that the thing us of the mother affect the child before birth is overwhelming. Physically and physically the mother's part in making her case what it proves to be so great that it borders close upon omnipotence. Napoleon's mother read histories of war, and was fired with the conquests of great warriors before the birth A woman of my acquaintance has an abnormal appetite for fruit because [illegible] her mother was living on a ranch where fruit was not to be obtained.

This supposed desire, tendency, and appetites are more logical explanations for children than those which are ambized and gratified. Therefore, it is most important that a woman who ever hopes to become a mother should not create a habit, appetite or taste which, by its indulgence, will harm her child physically, or, by its suppression, will harm it mentally.

The woman who fills her system with nicotine while carrying a child under her heart could not expect to give that child a good constitution.

If we in America consider cigarettes continually, and respect what they will hold craving.

Hundreds of young girls think a surreptitious cigarette is great fun.

If it ends at that, as it does in the majority of cases, no harm is done. It does not pay in this world to be too serious-faced, or, as a bright woman expressed it, "to be sicklies lightly buttoned up." But it does pay to so control our habits, appetites and customs that we are masters, and that our minds and bodies are kept clean, wholesome and well poised; and in so living that our children will receive only the best influences for their earthly portion of the lineament to which we end them.

Upon the condition of the mind of the mother depends greatly the kind of spiritual egg she culls from spaces at the moment of conception. To that ego are added the physical inheritance from the parents and ancestors and the prenatal influences of the mother.

Every new born child is, therefore, a wonderfully composite creature, but the mother who understands the law of prenatal influence, and adds to it a knowledge of what can be done by the right training of the human plant, as Luther Burbank expresses it in his wonderful book, can make her child into what she wishes it to be.

It is a remarkable fact that the present growth of the cigarette habit among women is largely due to men. I know at least a score of men who have taught their wives to smoke. They declare it is "sociable" and makes the home more "companionable."

Yet some of these men have been deeply concerned when one also grew upon their wives.

A gifted and beautiful young wife of my acquaintance smokes so incessantly that she is obliged to take a "rest cure" in some sanitarium once or twice a year.

Then, after clearing her system of nicotine, she begins to live it again. And never once does she admit to herself that the cigarette habit is the cause of her nervous breakdown. She always thinks it is due to her "artistic temperament" and over brain work.

It is to be regretted that women who occupy prominent positions in the world of society or of art do not feel the "noblesse oblige" which prevents a woman from placing her personal sanction on a habit which is an injury to the sex at large and to coming genera-

The Autobiography of a Bridegroom—by Dorothy Dix.

Chapter II.

I don't know whether I have said that Mamie was pretty. A peach. You could never have thought me married to a girl that looked like a second hand [illegible] and looked down to [illegible] on appearances.

Mamie did not [illegible] but she was a wonderful housekeeper. She was more than [illegible] a manager. She was up and [illegible] before I was awake in the morning, and she had breakfast ready for me at 8 o'clock sharp. I always got home at 8 p. m. and I always found dinner on the table. Mamie was a wonderful cook, and she had a genius for making a little go a long way. She was economical, but she was not stingy. She would buy the best of everything, but she never wasted anything. She was a wonderful manager, and I soon found that I could live on my salary better than I ever had before.

Of course, I was disappointed in Mamie's housekeeping at first. I had always had my meals served to me on time, and I had always been used to having my clothes kept mended and in order, and I was disappointed to find that she was not a perfect housekeeper in these respects. But I soon found that I could overlook these things in her because she was so sweet and loving and so anxious to please me in every way.

Mamie didn't hold with this school of architecture in hair dressing. Here was of the ornate, fluted and curled Renaissance period. And it took time to do it. About two hours on an average. Therefore, it was a manifest impossibility to undertake the structure before breakfast for a man who had to be at his office by half past eight. So she didn't do it, and I had to undergo in silence the sight of having last night's coiffure served up for breakfast.

"Mamie didn't hold with this school of architecture in hair dressing. Here was of the ornate, fluted and curled Renaissance period. And it took time to do it"

It wasn't particularly becoming, but it kept it out of the eatables and looked neat.

I won't deny that it was a blow to me, so it was, also, to find out that Mamie's complexion wasn't quite as rose as it was painted, and that the darling little curl behind her ear that I had begged her so often in the days of courtship to give to me was only hers by right of purchase. I don't wonder now that she refused me that love token, for I have found out that good natured hair costs money—lots of it.

Mamie also had the kimono habit. It came out absolutely at breakfast and lasted all day unless somebody came or she went down town. I am told by travelers that the Japanese women look perfectly ravishing in kimonos. Maybe so, but the stringy, sloppy things don't suit the American constitution, and I say that no woman can wear one without looking as if she needed a run in the park before breakfast and a bath before lunch.

Dear the kimono, anyway! I trace its coming into our country to when the war Japanese got good and even with Russia. In putting into their scrap with Russia. If there's ever a war with Japan, the married men will enlist as a unit and their battle cry will be, "Remember the kimono!"

Of course, these are trivial things, and I needn't set them down as the beginning of my being broken into matrimony. No that I resented the deshabille of home life without protest. It takes nerve for a man to criticise a lady's toilet, yet I worked my courage up to the sticking point, and did it once. That was enough for me. Plenty! Because Mamie did not take my well intentioned remarks in the spirit in which they were meant. Yet I went about it with what I thought was diplomacy and tact.

"My dearest love," I said, "of course, in my eyes you are always the most beautiful creature on earth, and have got Venus and Mrs. Langtry and all the other professional good looks skinned a block. Still, don't you think that it's a little—er—er—sort of not to say slovenly, but slack, not to comb your hair before breakfast and put on a dress that doesn't look as if you were [illegible] out of it every minute." Now, a nice, tidy shirt waist and a real clean collar, or something like that, is my idea of a suitable breakfast costume."

But my remarks seemed to get on Mamie's nerves. She flared up like a house afire, and told me that I didn't know what I was talking about, and that it was just what she had expected, just what Mrs. Smith Brown, who had been married three times and divorced twice, had warned her of—that just as soon as a man married a woman he got tired of her and didn't love her any longer, and that I used to always praise the way she dressed, but now I began to find fault with it, and I now knew what I was thinking about. I was thinking about that stenographer in my office who always wore shirt waist and looked though a college knows, which I could [illegible] But she was hard to death to fit it if I admired her more than I did my own poor wife, why didn't I marry her in the first place?

And so on, and then she wept, and I perjured myself by saying that I thought the kimono the neatest fitting garment in the world; but I had learned enough to let my wife dress as she pleased, without any further comments from me.

Another surprise was that I found among the conjugal duties of men in moderate circumstances is that of being a lady's maid. That sounds easy, but it isn't, and if I had known as much about matrimony before marriage as I do now, I would have tried to have fitted myself for the objections I was about to assume by at least taking a school of correspondence course in how to button up a shirt waist in the back, and at what angle a hat must rest upon the head to be on straight, and how many inches smaller than the waist measure a dress must be to really fit.

As it was, I went blithely forth under the serene impression that the lace and embroidery thing-um-a-jigs in which women look so lovely fastened with a few [illegible] strings that a woman could tie here [illegible] being called [illegible] to [illegible] button a garment that closed in the back with 1,647,859 buttons the size of a pinhead, that went into blind loops that you couldn't find with a search warrant, while a cab waited for me without the door and the bill mounted by the inch and pounds. Yet such became my daily duty, and the things I read, and the perspiration I shed, and the collars I wilted in my efforts to make a three-inch piece of satin cover a four-inch space forever smashed in Mamie's over the bib with which she [illegible] herself to bed.

For goodness' sake, says she, I don't see why you make such a fuss and bother about buttoning a shirt waist! It's the simplest thing on earth. All you have got to do is to fasten that invisible hook under the extra doux and fluff on that chiffon and pin it so it won't show. I could do it myself if it wasn't that I can't reach the middle of my back. And, I reason knows, you needn't swear about it and act as if you were a martyr. Looks to me as if a man might be willing to do a little thing for his wife when she asks him. Heaven knows you used to be tickled to death to tie my shoe or button my glove before we were married, and it took you a half hour to get my opera cloak on.

By degrees I became acquainted with my new duties. I learned how to hook up a waist without getting it crooked and having to do it over about three times and take thirty minutes for the job. I also ascertained that a hat is on straight when it's sitting over one ear, and that full dress for a lady is when she hasn't got much on and that the price of a hat is in inverse ratio to what it looks like it ought to cost, and most of all I slowly acquired discretion, for I found out that when a man criticises any part of his wife's dress she immediately goes down and buys something else in place of it, and he has to pay for both.

It is when at the theatre I see a married couple arriving a little late, and the man wearing a collar that has lost its first pristine freshness and starch, I feel like reaching across the aisle and holding out my hand to him and saying, "Shake brother for I know that he too has been undersidying Fifine, the lady's maid, and wrestling with the woman's dress problem in the [illegible]

"And then she wept and I perjured myself by saying that I thought the kimono the neatest fitting garment in the world"

"I learned to hook up a waist without getting it crooked and having to do it over about three times."

A RADICAL change will be inaugurated at the Globe Theatre on Monday, April 20, when the Adolph Mayer Musical Comedy Company will begin a series of productions of recent musical comedy successes and new plays, on an elaborate scale. The opening attraction will be a revival of Boston's greatest musical comedy success, the special production of Robert Hobart Davis' musical comedy, The Rose Queen of Sparkle Land, in which Miss Alice Dovey will be featured at the Globe Theatre in her old part as soon as she will be able to resume her work, which will be within a period of a few weeks at the most. In its way this announcement will be worthy of a special interest, and in its relation to the appreciation of the theatre going public. It marks the beginning of a new company, for new members, and the first production of the season to be made up of players each of whom will be specially cast for their respective roles. The bill will be changed as often as the public taste demands. Each piece will run at least two or three weeks. In this respect the Globe Theatre will be to Boston what the La Salle Theatre is to Chicago. The latter has specialized its attractions of the season to one in order to be given for the first time in any city. The second feature in connection with the Globe will be the production of all the most successful musical comedies including Sam T. Jack's, The Belle of New York, Peter Dailey's, The Runaways, The Country Girl, Fantana, The Social Whirl, The Girl from Maxim's, etc. The leading members of the new organization will be engaged for the season, and will be drawn from many of the most popular favorites who have delighted theatre goers with their fresh charms and talents in the past. Among those who will be heard in the new productions will be Miss Lucy Daly, Miss Ethel Johnson, Miss Ethel Hopkins, Miss Lillian Lawrence, Miss Ethel Hopkins, Miss Lillian Lawrence, Miss Ethel Hopkins, Miss Lillian Lawrence

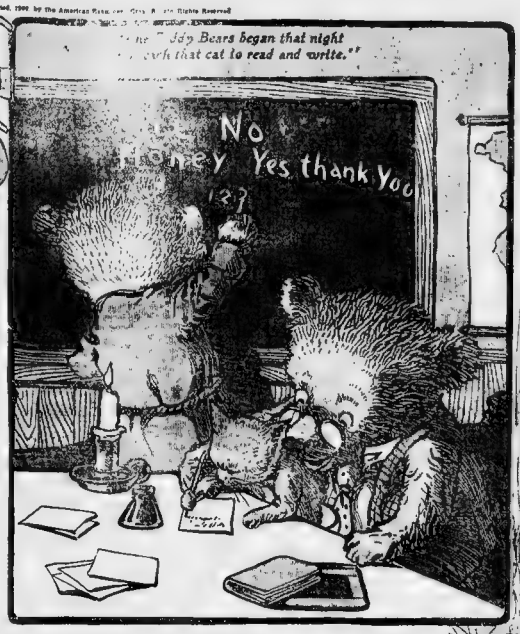
When
Was told to the bears by this ragged lad
"I'll ask you, friends; the meal was good
My hungry look you understood
In a little home on the mountain sid.
Some days ago a miller died,
So poor he hadn't food to eat.
And in right to grind, either corn or wheat
He left three sons—Jack, Will and Pat
Two mill, a donkey and this pet cat
We
drew lots to divide the estate
And tossed luck to decide our fate
My brother Pat drew the family mill,
And the donkey went to brother Will
And I drew Puss, as you may see,
And this cat is all that I possess,
But a boy told me to come to you,
And you would tell me what to do."
The story told, the cat said "Meow"
Which sounded like "Now, tell us how."

I have a plan," said TEDDY-B,
You leave the Pussy Cat with me
And you go back and stay away
For two whole nights and one whole day
And then return and you shall learn



"The Teddy Bears began that night
To teach that cat to read and write."

No. XIII. How a Cat Pleased a King.

"Catching rabbits was only play
For Puss and Jack that Summer day."

"They were given welcome by TEDDY-B,
And roasted beef and bread and tea."

"And there by order of the King
Were TEDDY-B and TEDDY-G
At the marriage feast and the gifts to see."

Catching rabbits was only play
For Puss and Jack that Summer day.
They filled the bag with parsley green
And then of grass they made a screen
And hid themselves till a rabbit came
To eat the parsley; it seemed a shame
To jump out quick and put that bag
Right on his head his mouth to gag
And then to shove him in so tight
He couldn't turn or squeal or bite;
But that's what Puss called dandy sport,
And Puss's plan had Jack's support
Over shoulder the bag he'd flung,
And march right off to see the King.

To sell his rabbits, while Mister Jack
Remained in the meadow till Puss came back.
Puss sold ten rabbits every day,
And each day he doubled the price to pay,
Till Master Jack were millionaires,
And all because of the Teddy Bears
Jack bought a castle and title grand
And ten thousand acres of mead'wland
He dressed in clothes of colors gay
And called to see the King one day
Puss wore along in boots and hat
And purple coat and green cravat,
And into placed Jack to the King
As the Lord Mr. Marquis of Carabaw
The King was pleased and his daughter, too,
When Jack asked if he'd like to woo,
The prettiest girl he had ever seen,
Some day, he said, she would be queen.

The wedding was held the following Spring;
And there by order of the King
Were TEDDY-B and TEDDY-G
At the marriage feast and the gifts to see.
And the Bears, who brought the day
To set right every proper thing to say
Was his to find cat in royal gown
And crimson boots and golden crown.

The dinner over the King stood up
And picking up his drinking cup
He said: "We drink the health to-day
Of the Teddy Bears, because 'twas they
Helped a hungry orphan lad
And cheered him up when he was sad;
And let us drink to another friend
Whose sporting power I can commend,
To Puss in Boots, for that's the name
I have ordered entered on my hall of fame,
That boys and girls who see boots and hat
May in years to come know this famous cat."

Puss would and Puss some such cat eat
Jack assured the bears and said that he
Would leave them all, while TEDDY-G
Gave him some lunch to take along,
To cover him up and keep him strong.

The Teddy Bears began that night
To teach that cat to read and write,
To talk out loud, to sing, to spell,
To do new tricks and to do them well,
Puss told the bears of a King, he knew
Who was very fond of rabbit stew,
And he knew, he said, some meadow land
Where rabbits lived in grass and sand,
And all he needed to make a catch
Were high top boots and a hat to match,
And some old bag with fastening strong
To carry the rabbits to the King

They welcomed Jack with plans complete
Puss had his boots on two hind feet,
And with feather top on a jaunty hat
He looked his part, a sporty cat.
Poor Jack didn't know what to say,
But he promised the bears that he'd obey
They said good-by to the Teddy Bears,
And then went off to look for hares.

THIRD SUSPECT TAKEN BEFORE VICTIMS OF WOBURN BANDIT GANG

"He Looks Like the Man," Say Officers Walsh and Holland at Hospital on Seeing Man Arrested in North Station.

WOMAN HELD UP AS POLICE SEEK SELTIN

Anarchist Records and Red Flag Found in House of Missing Cambridge Man Leads to Plot Theory.

ARRESTED last night on suspicion of being the third of the three Woburn bandits Stephen de Meo, an Italian, twenty-three years of age, is a prisoner in the Hanover street police station.

The man was arrested as a suspicious person in the North station last night at 10 o'clock by Policeman Cameron of station 1 to-day. Special Officer Herbert Colbert had had him under surveillance for about three hours.

"I am not the man you're looking for. I never was in Woburn. You're looking for a Pole," were the very first words the prisoner spoke when taken into custody.

Though the traffic on Causeway street at midnight, the man suspected of being one of the gang who shot down three men and a boy in Woburn was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where two of the victims, Joseph Reddington and Thomas Touhey, are lying dangerously ill.

De Meo was taken to the ward No. 8 where Policeman Timothy Walsh of station 1, Special Officer Thomas O'Donald and Patrolman Cavagnaro of station 2 were on duty.

"Looks Like the Man."

"Is this the man who shot you Thursday night?" they asked.

He looks very much like the man," said Walsh. "But it was dark and I could not be exactly certain."

Then the lights were turned low to make the examination as they were that fatal night.

"Now," was asked.

"He looks as much like the man as anyone could," said Walsh. "But the man had a dark slouch hat on while this man's hat is light."

The man was then led to Edward J. Holland's cot and the same question was asked. "Is this the man who shot you?"

Feebly Holland partially raised himself and said: "He looks like the man."

DeMeo said: "Do I look like a criminal? I have done nothing. You make a mistake."

"The man who shot me was a foreigner," said Holland in a weak voice. "I'm sure of it."

Later De Meo was locked in a cell at Station 1 in Haverhill Square.

While the Cambridge police were watching the house of Kasi Seltin at 15 Mellen street as one of the Woburn gang at No. 15 Mellen street, Cambridgeport, last night, and when the police of Boston and Cambridge were seeking the murderer of John Mc. Ross E. Durand of No. 78 Hurd street, Cambridgeport, was assaulted by a daring footpad, who snatched her pocketbook and ran down Mellen street almost in the shadow of Seltin's house.

The spot in the house where the pocketbook was snatched is known as the Seltin Foreigners are there.

Mrs. Durand, who is a widow, was returning from Boston on a Boston & Northern car about twenty-five minutes to nine and walked from the corner of Main and Hurd streets. She was followed by a man described as about twenty-five years old, who says he was following her from the time she left the car. As she turned into Mellen street the man ran after her, grabbed her pocketbook and ran down Mellen street to Main. Mrs. Durand screamed for help, but the man escaped.

Mrs. Durand went at once to police headquarters and told her story to Lieutenant James E. Hall, who sent out a general alarm.

NURSE LEWIS'S STORY TOLD FOR FIRST TIME CASTS NEW LIGHT ON TRAGEDY

Here is the story of Nurse Lewis of the murderous attack upon Druggist Bushee, told for the first time to-day.

By Mary I. Lewis.

On that Sunday night, I left my station on Washington street, in Boston, at about 10 o'clock. It takes a Somerville avenue car about twenty-five minutes to come out, and I knew that I had to wait for the car that night about fifteen minutes.

It must have been about 10:45 o'clock, therefore, when I got home. I had dressed, had taken off my dress and was removing the rest of my clothing when the doorbell rang.

Man on His Face and Hands

I went out to the door, saw a man there on his face and hands, and said to him:

"Who are you? and what do you want?"

"I'm Mr. Bushee," he said. "I've been hurt."

I didn't recognize him until he spoke.

I got him by the arm, and fairly dragged him the length of the entry and then through a rear hall to a chair in the back room.

Struck in the Back

I was wearing an [illegible] when he was struck in the back. He said, "when two or more men entered the store—then I knew nothing more for twenty minutes.

"After that I crawled to my bed in the [illegible] although I was [illegible] them," he said. "I lost my cap."

Yes, I did. I went [illegible] and dressed again as quickly as I could. Then I went to the [illegible] and [illegible] Bushee was [illegible] and he was covered with blood.

Fiancee of Druggist Killed by Assassins and Nurse Make Conflicting Statements. Store Entered Again to Hide Traces Left Behind?

That Charles E. Bushee, the Somerville druggist, died concealing the name of the man who struck him down to death, in his darkened drug store on the night of Sunday, January 12, was the story brought to the Boston Sunday American last night by an attache of the Somerville Hospital, who was at Bushee's bedside when the man was brought to the institution.

Policemen at the bedside asked him:

"Do you know who did this?"

The old druggist bowed his head in assent.

"I do," he said, feebly.

Within a few minutes he contradicted himself, and from that moment until his death, nearly four weeks later, he insisted:

"I don't know who it was."

It is declared by the Somerville police that Kelson has made a statement implicating two other men, which clears the mystery of the deadly assault.

Two arrests were made last night for the Somerville police. At an early hour this morning a third arrest was expected at any moment.

Look For Red Tags

We point out a few here well worth looking up—storming price cuts of so genuine an order as is to convince on sight—but where we mention specific are dozens of others that lack of space prevents our storming. All you have to do is to walk through the store and look for the tags that are red—they're all the guide-post you need.

Cut shows the machine we will sell for $17.75, $2 down and $1 a week.

This machine is one of the famous old reliable standard makes sold throughout the country by agents for $40.00. We can't use the real name, as that would hurt the agents' business, so we have named it the Essex.

On account of the four great Siegel stores being the largest retailers of sewing machines in America the manufacturer has made us a proposition whereby, if we take his entire excess production of his hands once a month, he will sell them to us for less than half price and guarantee that no other store in Boston will have the same machine

This sale opens the Henry Siegel 1908 Sewing Machine Club. Order one of the first one hundred machines and save $22.25 on a purchase amounting to only $17.75—$1.00 down and $1.00 a week

DESCRIPTION: Beautiful drophead machines; oak case, Piano finish. The machine is of the improved lockstitch type, full ball-bearing at five vital points, making it easy to run and almost noiseless. It has positive feed, self-threading shuttle, automatic bobbin winder. A touch of the finger raises the Head ready to sew, when not in use it makes a table. ATTACHMENTS: Buffer with shirring plate, tucker, six hemmers, one binder, one narrow foot hemmer that sews on lace at same operation, one quilter and all necessary tools. Free instructions by competent demonstrators. BASEMENT SALESROOM.

Lame, Sore and Sleepless, I Was Cured By Minard's Liniment.

My right arm and hand were so sore and bruised me so with rheumatism that I could not raise it to my head to comb my hair, so I had to bend over most double to comb it on the top of my head, they pained me at night, so that I could not sleep very good. I used a number of remedies for Rheumatism but none did me any good until I tried Minard's Liniment then I got help, and now I can't be without it in the house. It would cure them for I used it good for Headaches and sore throat, too. I can't thank you enough for what it has done for me and my brother, who has used it for a black and sore and got great help from it. He is seventy-seven years old. I gave one of our neighbors some, and she says the same as I do. Yours truly,

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty

Just Nothing to Try

Nearly every one knows that charcoal absorbs the gases and impurities in the stomach and bowels, and that a teaspoonful of pure charcoal will relieve the worst case of indigestion, biliousness, sour stomach or headache in a few minutes. But charcoal in lump or powder form is harsh and unpalatable, and few people will take enough to get the best results.

The new charcoal lozenges are made from the finest powdered charcoal, mixed with honey and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, and are very pleasant to take. Their use will soon show a wonderful improvement in the complexion, as pimples, blackheads and other eruptions are entirely due to impurities in the blood, which the charcoal absorbs and carries off.

Charcoal also absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the intestines and bowels, and carries them out of the system. Physicians and nurses use it in the sick room to sweeten the air. Smokers find that a few lozenges will overcome entirely the effects of tobacco. Ladies who value a beautiful complexion will find that charcoal lozenges will do more to improve it than anything else. Get a box of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges at any drug store, and begin to feel better at once. Price 25 cents.

Mrs. Glyn Aims Shot at Pilgrim Mothers As She Sails Abroad

Author of "Three Weeks" on Lusitania, Denies Having Called Women "Cats"

New York, Feb. 8.—Mrs. Elinor Glyn, author of the much discussed book entitled "Three Weeks," sailed for England on the Lusitania this afternoon and before she left the pier she had a few words to say about the Pilgrim Mothers who, she declared, had been misquoted by a reporter. Mrs. Glyn's name did not appear on the passenger list, but a friend acted as her press agent and announced that Mrs. Glyn had come to say good-by to a few friends who were sailing on the Lusitania. Mrs. Glyn, who is a handsome woman, was attired in a long coat of sable and a large hat of the same fur. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Elinor Glyn, who is also an author.

"I have been greatly misquoted," said Mrs. Glyn, "and I am very sorry that I ever said a word about the Pilgrim Mothers. Even you never really called the Pilgrim Mothers cats."

No. That is a harsh term. I never use harsh terms. Moreover the ladies did not greatly remind me of cats. They were more like a real section of [illegible] sparrows chattering under the eaves."

Then the Lusitania sailed.

START And Read This Great Story TODAY

"THE strangest will ever written!" old Lawyer Holly muttered to himself as he laid down the last testament of Revere Derne and glanced over his spectacles at Phillis, the dead millionaire's daughter.

The only other persons in the dingy little law office, adorned by leather-bound books and tin boxes, and redolent with musty odors, were Lord Askene and Howard Somer-set. It was late in the afternoon and the rays of the fading sun were doing their best to thrust a little cheer into a legal den that held gloom as a natural tenant.

There was a long pause after the lawyer's voice died away, and it was only after he had coughed dirge, as if to invite comment, that the girl said:

"I don t think I understand what you've been reading at all."

"I think I do," remarked Howard, casting an indignant glance at Lord Askene, who toyed with his monocle and looked at the young Harvard man with an air of amused tolerance. "It's all preposterous."

"A man dies and leaves a million dollars in stocks, bonds and securities all hidden away in an ancient oak casket which has a strange, mysterious history. The fortune it contains is to go to his daughter, if the casket and the mystic key which unlocks it are found by her within fifteen days!"

"To find the casket one must first find the key upon which have been engraved cabalistic numbers. The numbers must be deciphered. If anyone is to learn the clue which will lead to the discovery of the casket. But if all this is not done by Miss Darne, or her friends, within the few days given by law father every dollar to which she is rightfully heir goes to Lord Askene, who not only isn't any relative of this young lady but who has been repeatedly rejected as a suitor for her hand. "If she does not find the casket within 15 days, its custodian, he no one known, not even by Mr. Holly—will hand it over to Lord Askene."

"If this mystery is not solved, the will means that a young lady reared in luxury must be left to the mercy of the world, destitute and dependent. Either that or she must marry a title which is tied to a man she detests, and—"

"Miss Derne can speak for herself," interrupted Lord Askene. A little color showed in his pale cheek, and, although he spoke calmly, his poise of absolute composure had vanished. Into his dark eye came a gleam of undisguised malevolence as he looked at the tall young American who had won fame on the football team as centre rush at his varsity eleven.

"I think I have spoken for myself quite plainly already," said Phyllis, softly—and she laid a gentle hand caressingly on Howard's arm. Dressed in a brown voile gown, with a hat that was a triumph of millinery design, Lord Askene thought, although he was by very much need of her money, she looked a greater treasure than all the vast wealth any crashed old millionaire could ever hide in an old oak casket.

"Don't quarrel, my dear young people," interposed the old lawyer, smiling in his attempt at paternal admonition to the disclosures of the yellow fangs that served him for teeth. "It won't quite that they'd call 'good form' in England, you know," and he bowed obsequiously in the direction of Lord Askene, who gave him no more heed than he would to a riveted flunkey.

"Besides," old Holly added, "bickering is quite useless. It is the law which must be considered and obeyed. As executor I shall have to carry out the provisions of the will, strange though they may seem."

"Robbery!"

"And aid in the robbery of Miss Derne?" asked Howard, as he leaned forward and looked the aristocratic lawyer straight in the face.

"I object—I object!" exclaimed old Holly testily, thinking for a moment that he was in court.

It was a ghastly joke in legal circles that he would, through force of habit, arise to plead a demurrer when the undertaker arrived.

"Young man," he said to Howard, "robbery is a most offensive term. If—"

"Cut it out," Howard broke in, "I begin to believe you are in league with this gentleman from across the sea to pauperize a young lady or force her to become the unwilling bride of a man who would expect her to vow at the altar to support him, if she couldn't bring herself to promise to love, honor and obey!"

Lord Askene, who had apparently recovered his aplomb, replied by asking condescendingly if young like to ask—after the American fashion—what excuse have you for 'buttin in?"

"My excuse is that I am Miss Derne's fiance," replied Howard. "As she has neither father, brother nor sister, I think it's decidedly up to me to 'butt in' when her father has made with you a scheduled part to make her poor or miserable for life."

"So you are here to play the role of Sir Galahad?" asked Lord Askene with a sneer.

Declares Himself

"I'm here," retorted Howard, "to play on the level—something which seems to be quite beyond your comprehending. Why," and Howard turned to the lawyer, "it's all as plain as the nose on your wrinkled old face. Her father leaves his wealth to her with a distinct proviso. Marry Lord Askene, or go broke, or get nothing. Mr. Derne stormed, raved and threatened Phyllis when she refused his lordship, and then, after he died, she found that the price of her food and shelter is wearing this British title, a wedding ring. Outrageous! That word doesn't fill the bill at all. It is the meanest game ever put up on a young woman since the serpent handed Eve a pippin."

"But for the pride of this lady I would properly resent your insults," said Lord Askene stiffly. "And, by—"

"Do nothing," laughed Howard, in irony. "I'm thinking that you're thanking your stars that she is here and providing an excuse for your not making a more strenuous bluff. If you can suggest a fitter time or place for you to do any resenting why, just say so, and I'll be there, and I'll be glad to!"

Howard drew himself up to his full six feet and looked the athlete who had gone through the Yale centre so often that the sons of Eli said he answered to the immortal question, "Who will happy when an assault force strikes an immovable object?"

"This must stop!" cried Lord Holly in a panic. "If the lawyer for the defendant in the most unusual will case that ever came into this office should come up that rock I've been waiting for I'll drop on my knees and ask him to believe the broken bow at last!"

The look Ask n gave the aged Lawyer would have with perfect effect if had ev ried Cat rine pr sed soon to its hate. Advancing on some that tottery feet, she put her hands in hesitation and Holly continued his peroration to Howard to his pleas and pleading.

Plot to Rob

"Come now, Mr Somerset you must not run—n like that," he urged. "Why, what you've said is subject to an action for libel. I'm not prepared to say that it, sould. I'm positive—"

"Rats, bother!" exclaimed Howard, which all his legal ed got to do with the case when there's a plot to rob a girl of a million in good U. S. A. money?"

"I cannot," said old Holly, clearing his throat and adopting the oratorical delivery which was second nature to him when addressing the bench, "permit you to assail and asperse a dead client with villification which he cannot answer in person."

"I will not deny that it is of my knowledge that Mr Derne desired and planned to have Lord Askene marry his daughter. But I do not believe that he would compel her to marry against her will. Such a thing is unheard of in this land of free men and free women. Why, the very suggestion is preposterous. Mr Derne was a man of the highest standing in the community, and—"

"Which is why he must immediately be shown to have been a fool," broke in Howard. "Look at the facts. He leaves his daughter penniless unless she marries a man she loathes. Is that the act of a sane man? Is it the act of a man who would not be ashamed to have his will read in open court? Is it the act of a man who would not be ashamed to have his will read in open court? Is it the act of a man who would not be ashamed to have his will read in open court

WALL STREET IS DONE HOUSECLEANING

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8. Interviews, speeches and magazine articles on the [illegible] of finance prove that there is no difference of opinion at all over the programme to be pursued in reforming business affairs. What a glorious consummation! The whole Uncle Sam family has been making the old homestead resound with the smashing of furniture, and now that everybody is tired out it develops that every mother's son of them has been fighting for the same thing. Now that everybody takes a good rest a week's can be swept out into the back yard and when [illegible] business everybody will get to work.

It is said, indeed, in the pilgrimage of the speculative [illegible] we have taken that under cover of the family quarrel they could [illegible] pie and cake in the pantry. BURIAL TOMORROW OF REV. FR. SMITH

MONTEZUMA

Said by Many Leading Mining Men to be the Greatest Mineral District on the American Continent

The eyes of the mining world are to-day turned on Montezuma, Colo. This camp is attracting more attention than any other mining camp in the world. Two or three years ago the wonderful Goldfield, was just coming to the front, and you could have picked up the unlisted stocks for a mere song. To-day Goldfield is producing the precious metal at the rate of half a million dollars a week. Those who made such enormous profits in Goldfield mining stocks were those who had the opportunity to get them, and who had the foresight and foresight to GET IN AT THE VERY START. An opportunity of even greater promise is offered you in Montezuma NOW. To-day it is conceded that Montezuma is the coming great mining camp of the world, and the great metropolitan newspapers are among the wonders of this district in the press dispatches every few days. Nothing is telling of the wonderfully rich strikes that are being made, and of the rapid development of the camp. The great ore bodies to-day blocked out in some of the rich mines of this district are almost past human comprehension. Ore is being discovered which is not being counted by the ton, but actually by the pound, on account of its enormous richness.

One of the great mines in this district is the famous Sarsfield Silver Mine, consisting of 25 full mining claims, situated on the eastern slope of Treasure-laden Collier Mountain. This is not a mere prospect, it is a big, developed mine, ready to begin large production just as soon as the needed equipment is supplied. Teasers, working in a meagre way, have been known to secure wonderful results. Ironically enough, the tunnel in Mr. Sutherland took out ten thousands of dollars' worth of ore every month. He carried it up the ladder himself and sent it down the mountain side on the backs of burros. Think what a wonderful property this would be with modern facilities. That is the mission of this announcement—to solicit funds to provide this needed equipment.

Some Facts About Silver

The silver output for the mines of the United States for 1906 was valued at $57,524,960. There is money in the silver mining business.

The demands of the commercial world for Silver for coinage and manufacturing purposes now amount to over $200,000,000 annually.

The actual production of the world's Silver mines falls short by $40,000,000 of meeting the world's requirements AND THE DEMAND IS INCREASING.

During the ten years from 1896 to 1906 the price of Silver advanced from 46 cents to 69 cents per ounce.

More than one half of the world's supply of Silver is absorbed by the coinage requirements of the United States.

The commercial significance of these facts, will soon be facing famine conditions in the Silver market. The Price of Silver is bound to move upward, and where this advance will stop no man can say.

Far-sighted investors are buying up the stock of producing Silver mines—they are taking advantage of the present opportunity to "get into Silver" and secure a share in the stupendous fortunes that will surely be won by the owners of Silver stocks.

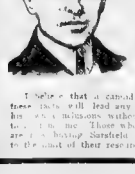
Your opportunity today is in Montezuma, for with your aid the Sarsfield Silver Mines can be made to yield up their unlimited treasures for the benefit of Sarsfield stockholders.

Turn Your Dimes Into Dollars

I believe [illegible] stock will [illegible] at 10 cents a share, will, within [illegible] DOUBLE AND TREBLE YOUR MONEY—$1.00 OF MORE [illegible] DIME YOU INVEST TO-DAY. I feel that this belief is more than [illegible] it is today what [illegible] destined soon to become one of the greatest silver lead producers in the West. The ore is there in enormous quantities—this is a positive fact—and to in full proper equipment to remove and market it means the beginning of handsome dividends for the fortunate holders of Sarsfield stock.

I firmly believe that everyone who invests in this splendid security will not only soon be in position to reap handsome profits from the decided advance in the price of this stock, which is bound to take place, but it he holds onto the stock until the dividends begin to pay out, that his profits will be far beyond his fondest hopes. My advice to every man or woman who reads this announcement is to get in on this SPECIAL DOLLAR OFFERING without any delay, and buy as much as you feel able to carry. I am positive in the belief that this is an investment you will never regret.

I Personally Guarantee These Facts



I have been [illegible] over the property, measured the ore [illegible] and personally know [illegible] Sarsfield Silver Mines [illegible] the richest Silver Mines [illegible] of Montezuma [illegible] are [illegible] amounting to 14th [illegible]

Large bodies of ore actually in sight and ready for stoping [illegible] width from 3 to 12 feet.

At least 1,000 tons of rich lead and zinc ore on the dumps [illegible] treatment this ore will realize $40 to $40 per ton after [illegible]

The whole property ready to be placed on a basis of heavy production and large dividends as soon as adequate facilities are provided for handling the ores.

I believe that a small investment in these facts will lead any investor to desire his own admission without further argument. Let me know if there is any more stock available and I will be pleased to reserve a block of Sarsfield stock, and to the limit of their resources.

C. D. Kellogg.

Why We Are Selling Stock

We are offering stock for sale in the Sarsfield mine in order to purchase the equipment which is needed. In order to properly care for our employes we must of necessity build several houses. We need a machine shop and a blacksmith shop, we need power drills, as that each mine can do as much work as three men with hand drills, we need an air compressor to pump fresh air into the mine; we need a tramway, by which we can send our ore down the mountain side by gravity, the full buckets pulling up the empty ones, we want to law a double track in the mine, so that we can increase our output, we want to purchase new cars and mining appliances of every nature. All this takes money. The present owners of the Sarsfield have put their money at hand to equip the property so that it will produce its highest capacity. We come to you just as a farmer would if he had only a wagon and a team. It would be well for him to sell a portion of his farm in order to equip it with the needed agricultural implements, so that he could make it produce a larger profit

Why Do You Put Your Money in a Bank?

Let me answer for you

You put your money there because you think the bank the only safe place for it- because you think that there it is absolutely safe. And what go ods have you for this belief? Do you imagine that your money is locked up in a big vault, and allowed to lay idle until you call for it? Not at all! There would not be such enormous profits in the banking business if that were the case. THE BANKER TAKES YOUR MONEY AND DOES WITH IT WHAT HE CHOOSES TO DO. He invests in meritorious enterprises and takes the big profits that might just as well have been yours. More than likely you get nothing at all for the use of your money, or if anything, not more than 2 or 3 per cent. The banker often gets ten and twelve times this amount—and he takes no risk at all, for it is your money he is using. Let me give you a little [illegible] open your eyes and look around you for the many really meritorious propositions that are open for investment. When you are satisfied that you have found something good, take a portion of your money out of the bank and do the investing, and take down the profits yourself

FIRST OFFERING OF STOCK AT 10c---PAR VALUE $1

The officers and directors of the Sarsfield [illegible] company are men [illegible] business men of broad experience and established reputations. They court the strictest investigation as to their records and their standing in the business world. They have organized this enterprise only after the most searching investigation into its merits and possibilities. They are not men of large means, otherwise they would not be offering this stock for public subscription; but they realize that with the needed funds immediately available they will be able to open a much larger and quicker success and in the end make more money for themselves by offering to the public a share in the profits to be derived from the operation of this splendid property.

There is positively no doubting of the wonderful future that the wonderful IMMEDIATE future ahead of the soon-to-be great mining camp of Montezuma. FIVE railroads are now projected into the district, which will give unexcelled transportation facilities in all directions. The Colorado & Southern is planning to build as soon as spring opens the nine-mile extension from Keystone to Montezuma. The Denver & Rio Grande has only 15 miles to build from Dillon to Montezuma. The Moffatt road is considering a line from Kremmling through to Montezuma. The Argentine Central is planning to extend its line from Wilcorf through the Treasure mountain tunnel into Montezuma. At the present time the distance by rail from Denver to Dillon, the nearest railroad to Montezuma, is about 120 miles. The extension of the Argentine Central into Montezuma would shorten by half the distance by rail from Denver to Montezuma.

The Montezuma Milling & Transportation Company has practically completed the building of a splendid concentrating mill, and will soon be ready to operate on Montezuma ores. This mill will be supplied with ore by an aerial tram that will connect the mill with the principal mines of the camp. This will ensure transportation cost on Sarsfield ore from the present cost of about $4.00 per ton down to the minimum cost of from eight to ten cents per ton thus saving alone will mean wonders to Sarsfield.

With all these [illegible] transportation and milling facilities, which are now assured to the Montezuma district, there can be absolutely no question as to the enormous profits which will be possible in the handling of these ores which were not possible to former operators working under the adverse conditions hitherto prevailing in the district. There is no preferred stock in the Sarsfield mine. All shares share alike. In order to provide the necessary funds for opening up the mine and installing needed facilities, a limited allotment of treasury stock is now offered at the very low price of 10 cents a share. This offer is limited and is subject to withdrawal without notice

STOCK FOR CASH OR 10 MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS

$1 down and	$1 monthly buys	100 shares per value	$100
$2 down and	$2 monthly buys	200 shares per value	$200
$5 down and	$5 monthly buys	500 shares per value	$500
$10 down and	$10 monthly buys	1,000 shares per value	$1,000
$25 down and	$25 monthly buys	2,500 shares per value	$2,500
$50 down and	$50 monthly buys	5,000 shares per value	$5,000

Price of stock will rapidly advance, and long before monthly payments are completed the value of your holdings should prove the investment a profitable one. I confidently expect to see Sarsfield stock selling at par within one year's time.

I Will Pay Your Expenses to the Sarsfield Mine

I want one prominent person from your community to visit the Sarsfield mine, and I am making a proposition by which the investigation can be made at my expense. If you would like to go to Montezuma and visit what is practically conceded to be the greatest mining district in the world, and make a careful investigation of the Sarsfield mine, in order to prove and verify every statement I have made regarding it, write me and I will tell you how you can make this trip at my expense.

Wonderful Future Predicted for the Sarsfield Silver Mine

The Rocky Mountain News of December, Sept. 8, 1907, says: "Mining experts who have recently examined the Sarsfield Silver mines on Collier Mountain, a short distance east of this place, have been most favorably impressed with the very unusual character of the ore showings on the dumps and in the workings."

The Mining Investor of Colorado Springs, Sept. 9, 1907, says: "Stockholders who have demanded something more than records of the inspection of the actual ore bodies in the mines and workings of the Sarsfield has invariably proved a decisive argument, even with the most skeptical."

The Western Investors' Review of Denver, August, 1907, says: "Nature crowned the mining districts of Colorado with Montezuma. Strike a pin in the center of this region, near the summit of the Rocky Mountains, and draw a 20 mile circle, and in the gold belt are mines that have already enriched the world over $400,000,000 in gold, silver, copper and lead, and are yet producing millions each year. Extend the circle fifty miles, and the product has been over $600,000,000."

PRESIDENT DOVEY SAYS IT'S NOW UP TO JOE KELLEY TO SIGN THE EX-GIANTS

By A. H. C. Mitchell.

It looks as though players no longer, like Mclgan and Frank Isbell, have been passing the Winter months writing letters to each other for the purpose of forming a co-operative baseball company, the individual victim to be President George Dovey of the New England League. Those who have penned pens and ink and failed to write to each other, they have not yet found the right kind of pen and ink to start a contract the season of 1908 will be known as the era of baseball. Browne seems to be the only one of the New York baseball reporters who has failed to receive a letter from Mr. Dovey. Perhaps the reason why Mr. Dovey has taken pity on Mr. Browne and has not written to him is because Mr. Browne has been in the habit of writing to Mr. Dovey and asking him to send him a contract. Mr. Dovey has been in the habit of writing to Mr. Browne and asking him to send him a contract. Mr. Dovey has been in the habit of writing to Mr. Browne and asking him to send him a contract. BAY STATE A. A. RULES FOR ENDURANCE FIAT CO. COMPETES WITH YANKEE PRICES Edited by J. C. KERRISON LICENSES MORE NEW ONES ANNOUNCED

MANY WELL KNOWN CARS IN BAY STATE A. A. ENDURANCE

Rules Just Decided Upon the Best Ever Devised for Similar Run.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The annual contest of the Bay State Automobile Association over the Boston Providence Worcester and Boston triangle, approximately 135 miles in length, to be held February 22 is attracting no end of attention, not merely from the local motorists, but from those who have participated in the great tours and contests of years. The rules and conditions for the run have been determined upon by the committee and will be distributed tomorrow. These are quite out to cover every feature of the contest and will be considered quite the most complete that have ever been decided for an event of the kind.

In addition to the road test the cars must submit to examination at the hands of a technical committee whose report will have a great bearing on the award. The enforcement of the various penalties for road defects or late passages, will still have a strong influence, but in this technical examination and the finding thereon the technical committee will be given a power unto itself in that respect.

Large Entry List

Although the entry blanks and conditions are now for the first time made public there is every reason to anticipate a large entry list. Flat Sporting and the White each with the record of a Pikes Peak ascent to be entered as are also the Stanley and Peerless which succeeded in getting to the top in the final run off. The Locomobile, Thomas Atlas, National, Reo, Rambler, Stearns, Oldsmobile, Maxwell, Jackson, Herreshoff, Stoddard Dayton, Royal Tourist and Pope will all enter cars while others are promised. The rules and conditions follow:

1—GENERAL PLAN OF THE RUN.

Contestants in the endurance run of the Bay State Automobile Association, to be held February 22, will be required to cover the entire route, the same schedule. An observer will be assigned to each car to take note of all adjustments, repairs and replacements.

2—ROUTE.

The route of the endurance run commences at the club house, 262 Dartmouth street and proceeds to Providence, going to Worcester and from that point to Boston. The total distance is approximately 135 miles, all of which is to be covered in one day.

A route car will precede the contestants to distribute sheets to mark the route.

3—CLASSIFICATION OF ENTRANTS.

The cars will be limited to two classes, viz: Class A, stock chassis cars as per manufacturers' catalogue, with touring body of five passengers. The cars must be in stock condition as regards engine, transmission, axles and wheels, and must be capable of carrying the full complement of passengers and baggage.

Class B, stock chassis cars touring car type. The cars must be in stock condition as regards engine, transmission, axles and wheels, and must be capable of carrying the full complement of passengers and baggage.

The cars in either class receiving the prize in their class in the 1907 contest are not eligible to compete with the same car.

Every trophy if won must be won by the same car in three successive runs, and the trophy in each case shall be awarded a suitable inscription as the owner of the car receiving the trophy shall direct, to be borne upon the trophy itself at his own expense, same rules and conditions as in 1907.

4—ENTRIES.

Each entry for this contest must be accompanied by the entrance fee, $25. The time for receiving entries will expire on February 15 at 5 o'clock p. m. Entries are to be addressed to Alfred N. Boddington, secretary, 262 Dartmouth street, Boston. The committee reserves the right to refuse any entry and to return the entrance fee sent in connection therewith.

5—OBSERVERS.

Each contestant shall on the entry blank nominate a competent observer, who may be a member of any of the clubs of which the contestant is a member, or a person outside of the membership.

6—CONTROLS, FUEL AND STOPS, REPAIRS AND REPLACEMENTS.

Each observer shall keep a record on sheets of all stops made, whether for fuel, water, repairs or adjustments, and the time of each stop. The observer will be allowed to make such repairs or adjustments as he may deem necessary, but the time consumed in making such repairs or adjustments shall be deducted from the time between controls. Any part of the car may be replaced, but the part removed must be delivered to the observer at the control following the one at which the part was replaced. WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Prince Luigi Amadeo of Savoy-Aosta, Duke of Abruzzi, is returning to this country. This time no mission of State is his, nor does he come as a conqueror with a fleet of warships, such as attended his visit here last June.

Abruzzi, explorer, adventurer, one of the Furthest North seekers, mountain climber and possible heir to the throne of Italy, comes to America merely a lover, a princely, but a plain lover. FIGURES GO TO COMMISSION

Report of City Auditor Shows Departments of 1907 Over an Appropriation

MAYOR HIBBARD [illegible] his pruning knife through the estimates for the current year made by the various departments and cut out $1,900,000. Last year the city budget carried a provision for the various departments outside of the water department which is said from most reliable sources to amount to $[illegible] mates of the various departments. Heads were [illegible] above the amount, but Mayor O'Connell cut them to that amount.

This year, however, Mayor Hibbard has not only scrutinized the department heads' estimates, but has also cut down the total of the appropriations [illegible] which includes the departments under the control of the Mayor, the county appropriations and the water department, by $[illegible] which includes the departments under the control of the Mayor, the county appropriations and the water department, by $12,700,000. Mayor Hibbard estimates that he will get $1,000,000 from the tax rate, if not more, leaving a tax rate considerably less than $25.50.

Some surprise was manifested last evening when one of the committee announced that Mayor Hibbard had cut down the appropriations $1,900,000 [illegible] ing here.

The AMERICAN Still the ONLY Gainer

The week ending February 8th, 1908, shows the BOSTON AMERICAN the only one of Boston's four leading newspapers to make gains over the corresponding week of 1907. It is significant that the American gained more than 11,000 lines in local store advertising alone.

Here is the story in figures:

1st Boston American	IN LOCAL ADVERTISING ALONE	Gained	LINES 11,564
2nd Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	4,900
3rd Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	32,200
4th Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	39,060

Circulation that goes to the home pays the advertiser.
When you see advertising increasing you know it pays.
The American's increase is a story of home circulation.

Don't Neglect a Sore Throat

because slight throat or chest affections, if not checked at the beginning, often lead to serious consequences.

Sloan's Liniment

applied to outside of throat or chest, draws out all inflammation and relieves congestion. A few drops of Sloan's Liniment in a little warm water makes an excellent anti-septic gargle. For Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Sweden Tonsils, Pleurisy, and pains in the chest, Sloan's Liniment gives instant relief.

Price, 25c., 50c., and $1.00.

Patronage of Ladies Asked

Half Per Cent a Month

Is all the interest we charge—absolutely the lowest rate charged on Furniture or Piano Loans by any money-lender anywhere. If you must borrow money, your American common sense will bring you here. When you get money from us $10 costs 5c. a month; $25 costs 12½c. a month; $50 costs 25c. a month. A $50 accommodation, repaid $1 a week, will cost you $1.50 for the year, absolutely nothing more for anything, if you keep your agreement. If you don't keep it, the cost will be more—but even then, far, far less, than if you borrow money from the high price money-lenders, and it cannot, under any circumstances, cost you any more than if you borrow elsewhere at legal rates. We loan on Furniture or Pianos. We charge only half per cent a month interest. All others charge two to forty times as much interest or discount. We charge nothing for "expense." Four others charge $2, $3, $5 or $10 for "expense." Four private offices, insuring privacy. Our customers make all payments at a bank—saving embarrassment of going to a Loan Office weekly. We serve more customers and serve worthy borrowers far better, than any other money-lender in Massachusetts. May we serve you? Hours: 8.30 A.M. to 6.30 P.M. Wed. and Sat. till Nine P.M. PIANO RESTRICTIONS "DON'T GO" WITH US

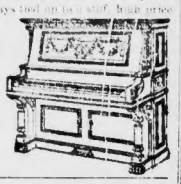
We are not hampered with restrictions, agreements, contracts, promises, verbal or written, such as prevent the ordinary piano dealers from lowering the price on any manufacturer's piano. The retailers of pianos are always tied up in a stiff, high price and dare not break it for fear of offending the maker and losing the agency of piano, etc. No such red tape is allowed to strangle us. We are the Free Lances in the piano business. "Sell" is the only watchword with us, and sell we must to keep our accounts clear. Profit above the small "expense percentage basis" means nothing to us. We look to the other departments of our business for profit. The piano department of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms is the greatest Bargain Market in Boston.



$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go to where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

LAD WOULD HONOR NATION'S HEROES

Youthful Patriot Born on the Day When Battleship Maine Was Destroyed.

EAGER TO ENTER NAVY

One small boy who is ten years old next Saturday has interested Washington officials in his efforts to make February 15 a national holiday. That is the anniversary of the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor.

The boy is Stephen Chadwick Donovan. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Donovan of No. 900 Columbia road. Born on the day when the lives of 266 American seamen were lost through their ship being blown up in a mine while they slept, the lad has been interested ever since he was old enough to understand anything in history in having national recognition of the event.

Named for Two Heroes.

He was named for two of the heroes of the disaster, brave Captain Sigsbee, who was in command of the Maine, and Father Chadwick, the chaplain.

Already he has succeeded in having an order passed in both branches of the city Council for the flags on public buildings to be displayed at half mast next Saturday. The order was introduced by Councilman James H. Kelley of Ward 9, and now lacks only the signature of Mayor Hibbard.

He wrote to Congressman John F. O'Connell urging him to see that something is done in Congress to commemorate the great disaster observed throughout the country. To his note there was received a reply from the Congressman saying he would see that the matter had proper attention. Secretary of the Navy Metcalf also sent a communication was expected to-day from official very soon.

Honors Country's Defenders.

Therefore Stephen is living in anticipation of hearing that on next February 15 at sunrise and sunset, and that the flags on all government buildings will be displayed at half mast. Taught by his parents to hold the heroes of his country in veneration the lad has never failed when given the opportunity to pay his own tribute. He believes that the destruction of the Maine and the loss of so many of the country's defenders is an event that should not be lost sight of by the young patriots and the old ones, too.

This is how he explained it to a Boston Sunday American reporter:

"I want to see February 15 celebrated as a national holiday. I am going to write to all of the Congressmen next week and ask them to try and make it a holiday. Captain Sigsbee thinks it ought to be, and I do, too. Don't you?"

Prepares for the Navy.

The boy is in frequent communication with both Captain Sigsbee and Father Chadwick. He has received a number of souvenirs from the commander of the ill-fated battleship. Chaplain Chadwick has also sent him a number of tokens of his appreciation of young Sigsbee's patriotism.

The lad is a pupil in the fifth grade of the William F. Russell Grammar School in Dorchester.

Aside from his desire to secure this national holiday, he has one other model. Both and those is to become an officer in the United States Navy. Even at the age of ten he is already preparing himself in a small way for the time to come when he may be selected as the candidate for admission to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Boy Who Asks Congress to Make Maine's Anniversary a Holiday

BRING FEVER TO HOUSE IN CARPET

Four inmates of the Industrial Home for Girls, a private philanthropic institution in Prospect avenue, Revere, are suffering from scarlet fever and the institution has been quarantined. The other inmates in the matter are under medical supervision.

The four stricken girls were taken to the Lynn Hospital for contagious diseases yesterday. Two of the girls left on the home are isolated from the others and closely watched, as they have been exposed to disease.

About four weeks ago a scarlet fever patient, thought to be a victim of measles, was taken to the home. The disease was spread by the four now assigned the task of cutting and fitting carpets for the rooms in the home.
